

LICHFIELD BAR

The bar is named after the famous British photographer and first cousin of Queen Elizabeth II, Lord Patrick Lichfield. Thanks to the closeness to the high society, as well as his exquisite manners and the playboy reputation, he became a hero of multiple photo sessions – none of which though can be compared to the amount of photo masterpieces which he created himself.

The heroes of his photos were actors, musicians, models, as well as ordinary people. He imprinted in film “the swinging 60s”, and in 1990s he was among the first to use digital technology in photography. Lord Lichfield worked for the best glossy and fashion magazines of United Kingdom, as well as took photos of the Royal family.

The walls of the bar are decorated by some of his best photography works: portraits of Meryl Streep, Evan Macgregor, Colin Farrell, as well as unique photos from the wedding of Mick and Bianca Jagger. Among other famous works by maestro – wedding photos of Prince Charles and Diana Spencer in 1981, as well as a series of photos of Soviet reality, which was done by Lord Lichfield during his visit to USSR in 1989.
